FBI Director Christopher Wray isn't positive Donald Trump was actually struck by bullet during the attempt on his life, RadarOnline.com can reveal.

The FBI director said: "I think with respect to former President Trump there's some question about whether or not it's a bullet or shrapnel that, you know, hit his ear."

He did clarify the FBI-led investigation into the shooting – which is treating the attempted assassination by 20-year-old Thomas Matthew Crooks as an act of domestic terrorism – is “very much ongoing.”

Nonetheless, Wray added: “I don't know right now whether that bullet, in addition to causing the grazing, could have landed somewhere else.”

While Trump has insisted he was hit by a bullet in the “upper part of his ear,” and has been seen at times wearing a padded gauze over his ear, to date, no medical records have been released and no medical professionals came forward to discuss Trump’s treatment. Itiple sources in different angles that a bullet went through his ear. I’m not sure it matters that much.”

Trump's doctor, and former White House physician Ronny Jackson took to X to excoriate Wray, tweeting: "ABSOLUTELY IRRESPONSIBLE for Chris Wray to make such a statement as Director of the FBI. On July 20, Trump posted on Truth Social a letter Jackson released regarding the shooting that stated in part: "As reported and witnessed by the entire world, he sustained a gunshot wound to the right ear from a high-powered rifle used by the would-be assassin."

Jackson went on to say: “The bullet track produced a 2 cm wide wound that extended down to the cartilaginous surface of the ear.

“There was initially significant bleeding,” but given “the broad and blunt nature of the wound itself, no sutures were required.”
